Dedication

We, the eighth grade class at West Middle School feel our memory book should be dedicated to Mrs. Sipsey. Mrs. Sipsey has been more than just a teacher to the students on the Red Team this year. We always have looked forward to going to her class where we discussed topics that were new and interesting to us; from current events to the witches of Salem, from psychology to economics. Mrs. Sipsey has given us so much that we just wanted to give her something in return. Thank you, Mrs. Sipsey, for caring about us.

Administration Message

Dear Friends:

This past year has probably been the most dramatic in the history of Western Civilization. One country after the other has moved toward democracy, declaring its freedom and independence.

In our own way, we have been participating in a revolution whereby both teachers and students have been empowered to make decisions relating to the learning environment and curriculum problem-solving.

William E. Hart, Principal

The middle school reorganization which has been underway for only two years has caused a significant shift in the way students learn. You have been at the "cutting edge" of this process which transfers the responsibility for learning from didactic (teacher telling) to Socratic (teacher questioning). All of you have participated in Paideia Seminars, which have allowed you to question and interpret books, articles, paintings, etc. You have been required to answer the question, "Why?" and respond with your interpretation and supporting evidence. In a word, you have been improving your problem-solving skills which will greatly enrich your future educational experiences. You have been trained to see the interrelationship of the subject disciplines and the fine and applied arts in numerous interdisciplinary units. This is the heart of your middle school experience which sees learning as an integrated whole rather than segmented pieces.

Our wish and hope for all of you is that these decision/problem-solving skills will give you the confidence and independence in learning which will enrich your love of learning and provide you the tools to actively participate and contribute to an ever-increasing interdependent world.

Maintain your enthusiasm and involvement in helping the less fortunate in our society.

Thank you for your contributions of leadership and school spirit. I extend the best wishes of the staff and faculty for happiness and success in the future.

Sincerely,

William E. Hart
Principal
